

SHANNON ALBERT-MCDONOUGH
Director of Services, Honeywell Aerospace

I was raised to value education, and studied and lived in two countries, and left my undergraduate studies with a BS in French and German. Wanting to focus more on the quantitative, I continued my education and got a MBA, with concentrations in Operations and International Business. While in graduate school, I was Co-Captain of the MBA soccer team, and was recognized with an award by my classmates for embodying the high standards and principles of the program.

PROFESSIONAL

Currently Director of Services within Honeywell Aerospace, my business (profit and loss) encompasses multiple groups across several business units bringing together disparate services and offerings into one cohesive team. This diverse and complex business totals $125M in revenue per year and requires me to manage all functions in a highly matrixed organization. I have traveled extensively in over 25 countries, partnering and promoting industrial cooperation with those nations and the companies within.

In 2006 I led a team of lawyers and sales professionals to secure a large ($110M), strategically important contract win with a Chinese OEM. This major win tested my major strengths which include tenacity, intelligence and diplomacy. The team was recognized internally for its efforts. Another poignant accomplishment occurred in 2000, when I led a team which set up a total logistics service (TLS) for the United Kingdom Ministry of Defence. The TLS was for the engines on the Chinook helicopter, and was one of Honeywell's first TLS programs. The Honeywell team was honored in front of the British Parliament for helping the UK cut its defense spending and is still a benchmark program.

In May 2006 and again in November 2007, I was selected for Honeywell's Focused Development Program (FDP) for leadership program. Annually, only the top 3% of its 100,000 employees are asked to participate in this elite program.

PERSONAL

I believe in giving back to the community and do so by being a Board Member of Phoenix Youth at Risk. This organization transforms young people's lives through mentoring. The programs are impactful and have helped over 2000 youth to date. Check out the organization at www.phoenixyouthatrisk.org.

Running, reading and spending time with family and friends are some of my favorite pastimes. Having a young daughter keeps me active and ultimately I gain my main source of creativity and exercise from her!
